Fuddruckers to Feature its Signature Burgers this May

Fuddruckers brings back three popular burgers to its lineup

HOUSTON, TX – April 25, 2011 – Fuddruckers (NYSE: LUB), the Texas-born home of the World's Greatest Hamburgers, will feature two of its most popular burgers—the Southwest and the Swiss Melt—and bring back the Inferno Burger for the first time in five years to its already famous lineup of premium quality specialty burgers this May.

Piled high with crisp toppings and served on its homemade, warm buns, baked fresh daily at all Fuddruckers restaurants, its three signature burgers are designed to provide guests with new options and a different twist to the classic hamburger for which Fuddruckers is famous.

First debuted in 2006 as a limited time offer, the Inferno Burger is specifically for those who can handle the heat and not for delicate taste buds. Extremely popular among those who prefer spicy fare, it features fresh jalapenos, caramelized onions and pepper jack cheese.

Meanwhile, both the Southwest and Swiss Melts have remained highly popular among longtime guests who custom order the specialty burgers, as neither appear on the standard menu in most Fuddruckers locations. The Southwest initially debuted in 1998 when Fuddruckers first began serving guacamole, and is stacked with crisp bacon, pepper jack cheese and fresh guacamole. The Swiss Melt, formerly known as the Mushroom Swiss Burger, is topped with classic sautéed mushrooms, grilled onions and a thick slice of melted Swiss cheese.

All three burgers are available for a limited time at participating locations. For a complete list of Fuddruckers locations, please visit http://www.fuddruckers.com/findus/.
